Lecturer Says Those Who Don't Like Policies of United States Should Join Native Armies.

If there is any man of foreign birth Mr. or parentage in the United States who does not like either the domestic or foreign policy of this country, he ought to go back to his home without delay. I can assure him of a warm welcome is fit physically, and if he is not, it will find a place for him in the munition factories or grain fields."

In these words, Miss Belle Kearney, of Mississippi, traveler, lecturer and author, stated her platform of Americanism in her address on "The Light on the Flag" yesterday afternoon at Broad Street Methodist Church. Miss Kearney spent several months in Europe since the outbreak of the war, and her address was composed largely of her address was composed largely of a narrative of conditions in the countries involved in the struggle. Democracy, as believed in by the zation of Protestant churches, so that the rich and the poor will join more and more in worshiping together. It must become operative in husiness, producing a spirit of fraternity in the Christian sense in commercial enterprises, until labor and capital toil side by side in understanding. Democracy, in the third place, said Dr. Coffin, must be applied to the whole world, until all nations join together in equality and justice and the greatest and the weak-set are each accorded their due by the others.
